Introduction

As already mentioned, the manifestation of various speech expressions in different texts, communication to study the linguistic structure, rules and methods of various forms and types of communication,the formation and development of principles and the structure of communicative expression, speechabout determining whether the illocutionary purpose of the act depends on the structure of the communicative situation. A scientific study of the importance of reasoning in communicative linguistics done. If we scientifically pay attention to each goal one by one, first of all "Pragmatics" term is a field that attracts us and encourages us to know information.[1] So,"Pragmatics"- Greek, meaning thoughts such as "work", "movement", studying the functionality of language units in speech is the direction of semiotics and linguistics. This field was also used in the times before Socrates and Later, philosophers such as J. Locke, E. Kant adopted it from Aristotle. In this regard, The stream of "pragmatics" emerged, and years later, modern linguistics as a field of science turned in the direction of Today, this field is being updated and researched is going One of the main goals of pragmalinguistics is the speech realization of linguistic possibilities, learning language as a means of information communication. Pragmatics and pragmalinguistics is considered as a science related to linguistics. Both disciplines have an area of intersection, that is, in communication studies the processes related to the functioning of the language. Also, linguistics is the language system of communication Pragmalinguistics is related to the social structure of communication, its circumstances and situationslearns to adapt. For example, pragmatics is a science connecting linguistics and sociolog can be defined as This point of view is presented, in particular, in the works of the Danish scientist J.[2] May and he defines the subject of pragmatics as follows: "Pragmatics is a certain communit learns to use language in communication between people depending on the circumstances". I. Susov, as well believes that pragmatics has the status of an independent science and "... at the present stage I for myself pragmatics as an independent interdisciplinary field of knowledge closely related to linguistics I do not rule out the right to look".[3] In fact, speech is something that makes a person together with others directs communication based on the goal. Fulfilling our vital needs, from other side In order to get auxiliary power, we are forced to enter into communicationand a little stubbornness from all situations in life and beautiful in accordance with the character of peoplewe speak with the culture of communication and we do collective and individual communication.

As we mentioned at the beginning, this article deals with communicativeness in pragma linguistics and its we thought that it is permissible to know the illocutionary acts of the expression structure. It is in the pragmatics of this field and how important it is in linguistics to speak fluently and attentively regardless of the language attractive, impressive, attractive and perfect in every way. A certain idea When the speaker expresses to the listener, the speech should be fluent, clear and understandable for the listener It is important because the listener understands you and returns a response of a certain content sometimes even critical thoughts and comments are necessary. According to S. Azimova, according to the essence of the concept of speech act, communicative intention is reflected in the speaker's speech. Austin Arso Setyaji noted that speech acts were divided into locative, illocutionary, and perlocutionary acts. This from acts, the concept of "illocutive act" is defined in pragmalinguistics by a person in the speech process andSh. Safarov emphasized.[4]

Communication is a process of two-way exchange of information leading to mutual understanding. And information means knowledge, and we do not enter into communication with such opinions that confirm each otherproves that we cannot get any information. Communication between people exchange of information arising from the need for cooperation. Contact us for ideas exchange, analyze it and create a basis for us to be aware of new information and communication makes it easier. We consider such processes only speech activity, emotions, we can send the thought to the listener faster through facial expressions. Speech activity is social by man - mastering historical experience and passing it on to generations or establishing communication, own actionsIt is the process of using language as a means of communication for the purpose of planning.Communication actually occurs as a result of communication between two or more individuals.Communication is naturally carried out in some events, in the course of a conversation, in a group of people It is a basic tool for exchanging ideas and gaining knowledge when a goal is set is considered In today's fast-paced modern life, communication is both live and online can be done quickly and easily through electronic means. Sometimes it is some situations in life it also creates great comforts so that we don't get cut off from life. As an example, only one if we refer to the quarantine period, communication continued only online, receiving information about the condition of the sick, unfinished academic years, election processes, online classes; that we somehow failed to deal with all of these; external facing we almost lost communication for a while, and this is due to necessity. Communication means the exchange of information between living and non-living systems. Communication is taught to a child in kindergarten from an early age, because it is individual with the childthe knowledge and skills taught to him while practicing are similar to those of other adults or himself when talking with peers, when entering into a dialogue, approach the question correctly, answer intelligently is clearly visible in such cases. As he grows up, his skills are nature and environment changes in the environment increase the interest in communication and sometimes even their speech it is difficult to stop the process. That's why when poems are memorized to children or When the stories are told, the events and the participants of the process are also complete with their actions. They to express, and they can quickly and easily explain situations through facial expressions. So communication is not just simple speaking. And in pragmalinguistics through communication, we make speech processes easy and comprehensible to a full-fledged listener we will create the ground for our delivery. As we mentioned, we are communicating through communication, however cold style, that is, there is nothing but dry words. But such a situation We believe that visual communication has a great role in mitigation.

The conclusion of this article is the study of the linguistic structure of communication in pragmalinguistics and its applying to life in communication, linguistic skills of human speech in the process of communication applying it to the process, adjusting and expressing it, leaving the demonstrative factors units reflecting the content of thoughts and pragmatic communicative connection enriched with formative scientific information.
